PREDECESSORS.—Sir John De Courcy, a valiant soldier, conquered Ulster in 1180, and remained Lord of that province, until upon the accession of King John he was taken prisoner, deprived of his province (subsequently conferred by patent 1205 on Hugo de Lacie, Gov. of Ireland) and estates, and condemned to perpetual imprisonment in the Tower; it is said that after he had been confined about twelve months a dispute arose between France and England relating to the Duchy of Normandy, and the decision having been referred to single combat, he proffered to represent England in the fight; he and the French Champion having entered the lists the latter was seized with a sudden panic and fled the arena, when the victory was awarded to England; for this service the King restored him to his estates and offered to grant him anything within his gift; he, however, only asked that his successors might have the privilege (their obeisance having first been paid) to remain covered in the presence of His Majesty and all future Kings of England, a request that was immediately granted; d. 1210.
